NBKRIIST Recognized as Potential Nodal Centre for Universal Human Values (UHV)

NBKRIIST has been officially recognized as a Potential Nodal Centre for Universal Human Values (UHV) for the period 2025–2027. This recognition has been officially communicated through email, by Dr. Neetu Bhagat, Deputy Director, UHV Cell / Administrative Bureau, AICTE, New Delhi, on 13 December 2025.

This recognition reflects the institute's sustained commitment and dedicated efforts in inculcating human values among students and faculty, aligning with the broader vision of holistic and value-based education as envisaged in NEP 2020. The acknowledgement by AICTE highlights the significant impact created by NBKRIST so far in promoting Universal Human Values within its academic ecosystem

As a Potential Nodal Centre, NBKRIST is expected to further strengthen the integration of UHV as credit-based courses within its academic framework and actively promote the philosophy of Universal Human Values across the region. With the support of AICTE-appointed Regional Coordinators and national UHV committees, the institute is well-positioned to emerge as a leading hub for value education, contributing meaningfully to national development through ethically grounded and socially responsible engineering education

In continuation of the UHV Nodal Centre recognition, NBKRIST has also demonstrated active engagement with the Universal Human Values movement through its participation in the 10th International Conference on Human Values in Higher Education (ICHVHE 2025), held in online mode from 19 to 21 Dec. 2025. The international conference, themed "Empowering Youth through Value-driven Education - for a Happy and Peaceful World", was endorsed by AICTE and UGC and organized under the UHV initiative, providing a global platform to deliberate on the integration of human values in higher education.

Notably, Ms. B. Raghavamma, Assistant Professor, Department of English and UHV Coordinator, NBKRIST, played a significant role by being selected as a Panelist and also serving as a Conference Volunteer. Her contributions to panel discussions on embedding Universal Human Values in higher education and her support in the successful conduct of the conference reflect NBKRIST's academic leadership and commitment to value-based education.

The participation of NBKRIST faculty and students in this international forum strengthens the institute's position as a potential nodal centre and reinforces its vision of nurturing ethically responsible and socially conscious professionals. The initiative strengthens NBKRIST's commitment to value-based and holistic education. Through Universal Human Values, the institution promotes ethical awareness and social responsibility.
